"GUILTY!"

The Verdict of "Twelve Good Men and True."

a Six-Minute Deliberation Guitea Makes the Most of His Last Chance to Abuse Judge Porter.

Associated Press Dispatches.]

Washington, Jan. 25. — At three o'clock Judge Porter concluded his argument and Judge Cox charged fury. At 5:35 the Court was called to order, and at 5:36 the jury came in and rendered a verdict of "guilty," as indicated.

At three o'clock Judge Porter con cluded his eloquent and masterly argument in behalf of the prosecution.

AWAITING THE VERDICT.

After the charge of Judge Cox, and after the jury had been out about twenty minutes, a recess was taken until half past five. Many of the audience who had virtually been im-prisoned since half past nine in the morning, availed themselves of the opportunity to obtain air and lunch. The prisoner, at his request, had been allowed, soon after the jury left the court-room, to retire to a little room he has occupied since the trial began, as a waiting room during recess. Before leaving the court-room he evinced considerable nervousness but on reaching the compartments he regained his usual composure and his assurance soon returned. He sent out for some apples with which he treated his attendants, meanwhile chatting familiarly and good naturedly He was asked what he thought the jury would do, and he replied, "I think they WILL ACQUIT ME Or disagree, don't you!" Within two minutes after recess had been taken the jury called to the bailiff in waiting that they were ready with their verdict. They were informed a recess had been taken and Judge Cox bed had been taken and Judge Cox had left the Court room so they remained in their room until Court re-assembled The rumor that the jury had agreed was quickly spread from one to another, and an excited crowd surged back into the court room and anxiously awaited what all seemed to expect—a verdict of "guilty." The musty, anverdict of "guilty." The musty, an-tique room is devoid of gas and a score or more of candles which had been placed upon the desks of the Judge, counsel and reporters imparted a weird and fancifully unnatural aspect to the grim old place. The shadows, thrown upon the dark background of walls, account like fitting a counter to release to seemed like flitting spectres to usher in the sembre procession of those who held in their hands the destiny of

GUITEAU'S VINDICTIVENESS. On being brought into Court this morning, Guiteau exclaimed: "My sister has been doing some silly talk in Chicago. She means well, but she is no lawyer." The prisoner then took his seat, when Judge Porter arose and resumed the closing argument in be-half of the prosecution. Guiteau, as usual, continued his frequent and annoving interruptions. For the next half hour there was a continuous stream of interruptions and abuse from the and a score of times he denounced Porter as a liar, with various adjectives. Never before had his vin dictiveness been so plain and his cunning merged into angry spite, and he unwittingly emphasized Porter's sketch

SAN DIEGO ON THE RAMPAGE. It would seem that the furies have gotten possession of the San Diego Union, for it yells like a bad boy in the green fruit season, and will not be forted. We do not like to be personal, but we waive the disinclination to do so this once because it fits in well to do so, and mention that the Union is a Gun concern, but one would be led to suppose from the report of its late disarges that the calibre of the institution was that of a pocket pistol rather than of a Celumbiad. Yes, even the than of a Celumbiad. Yes, even the crackers with which in our boyhood we used to do honor to the memory of the university did not succeed in their recent hazing enterprises. President Fourth of July, made a more manly noise than does this San Diego gun when speaking of Los Angeles and Wilmington harbor. Now this is our preface to the assertion that the San Diego Union has been filling its columns of late with the most outrageous misrepresentations of us, and its attempts to prod us with its tiny fork insight to be in the right place. From appear to be the outgrowth of a most devilish spirit of jealousy that cannot be accounted for upon any other hypothesis than that the man who wrote of us has grown crazy from the friend of his and the University, whose diet of Dead Sea apples upon which interests we shall take pride in here diet of Dead Sea apples upon which after noting. Of the other addresses have fed for the past fourteen years. should like. That of Mr. Jarboe seems Alas, for the man doomed to be a prey to the "green-eyed monster." As many of our readers do not read the Union (for which let them offer devout thanks) we should say, to give them an insight into the animus of this onslaught upon us, that it is the result of a school-boy quarrel between the Herald of this city of the first part, and San Diego county in its entirety (its sterilty, horned toads rattlesnakes, fallacious hopes and toredos, etc.) of the second part. And it is necessary to a better appreciation of the quarrel and the antagonists to say that the conductor of the Herald once ran a paper in San Diego, and had frequent bouts with the Garfield, has been brought to a close. rooster of the Union on his own And the verdict is GUILTY! We bedung-hill, so that, being familiar lieve the American people will say of with the soil and climate of that jury: "Well done, patient, long the town of two boasts, and having suffering, good and faithful men!" grown hard upon the "unsubstantial The terrible crime committed against visions" of ten to twelve years ago, is society and humanity, should not be

Well, to make mention of those scraps of history-preof the Union, and the phials of its venom emit an odor which reminds one of the smell-pots of Chinese war-

But we do not propose to be an apologist for one or the other party to this game of throwing mud-balls and dirty water. We will leave the comtent ourselves with suggesting that they had better fight it out in some private way and not in such a manner as to stir up unkindly feelings between the members of two sister communities whose interests have so much in common, and who can gain nothing by recrimination. THE STATE UNIVERSITY.

By the courtesy of a friend, we have been permitted to glance at the "addresses" at the inauguration of the officers of the University of California. Our attention was more patticularly directed to that of President Reid which abounds in some logic, and a good deal of cold hard sense. If we should judge the new President by this address we should say he was rather slow, perhaps, but solid and sound in all the essentials that go to make up a presiding genius of such an institution as our University. We think we can dent Reid was there, with a clear per ception of his power and duty, from which he did not shrink at the critical moment, and who showed himself equally clear as to the duty of the students on the occasion referred to. This one act stamps him as the solid man in what we believe from our present the show of vigor on that occasion and the good practical common sense in his address we enroll ourselves as a to be ornate and scholarly. Mr. Oatman's to be appropriate and happy. Mr. Bacon deals largely in historical details. We congratulate the Regents and Faculty on the encouraging outlook, for our great institution of learning, and hope it will receive, as we believe it now ought to, the support of every lover of learning in the State.

ATHLETIC BALL.

The New Club Room Dedicated Last Night.

Made by Downey and Others-

For several months past the young olks of this city have been looking orward to the time when the club coms of the Los Angeles Athletic club would be completed. Work has een rapidly progressing and the rooms and gymnasium were completed a few days ago. A description of the club rooms was given in the TIMES a short time since. The much-talked of opening ball and dedication took place last night; and was one of the most brilliant affairs that has taken place in this city for some time. The boys may well be proud of their efforts, for their club will rank with any in the State. E. A. Preuss made the opening speech He gave a brief history of the club and referred to the success the boys had met with in their struggles to make the club what it now is. He was followed by Governor Downey who made one of his strong speeches. He said:

THE GOVERNOR'S TALK. Mr. President and members of the Los Angeles Athletic Club: It is difficult nowadays to say anything new or interesting on occasions like the present. The march of progress and intelligence is so marked and great that really no individual citizen can claim special distinction in knowledge. The avenues distinction in knowledge. A PEDESTRIAN CONTEST.

Woman to Outwalk Two Men. Madame Du Pree commences at the Pavilion on Friday night at 8 P. M. a one hundred hour's walk against two picked men of this city, Charles Fish and W. H. Wiseman, for sweepstakes and $750, money already deposited. The terms of the match are as follows: She is to walk one hundred consecutive hours, the men to walk fifty hours each so that in order to win the race Madame Du Pree must beat the combined scores of her two contestants. The admission fee during the day will be 25 cents, evenings 50 cents. And right here one word as to the pedestrienne. Seven years since she was quite a confirmed invalid, and the cure that physicians were unable to bring about with all their science and skill was effected by daily walk, gradually increased until a saunter of twenty or thirty miles seem-ed a mere bagatelle. What training and the exercise of a determination to "get well, spite of the doctors" have done for her they will do as well for the ladies of Los Angeles who complain of aching feet and tired backs, after a shopping trip of an hour or so; and to these we would offer the word of advice: Drop in at the pavilion and see how it is done and then go and do likewise.

The hall will be suitably "tracked" and three inches of soil and ashes covered by two inches of sawdust will make a "spurting" ground as springy as the turf of moister lands than California.

More Murders and Crimes Committed by th in This City.

It has been well said that "Knowledge is power." Hence the deduction that all information, be it good or evil in its character, is useful. Moralists have argued from time to time for the suppression of the publication of the details of vice and crime, but it has been the experience of men of the world that a theoretical knowledge of the practices of criminals has been advan tageous. In any event, the elements of crime are invested with a peculiar interest for all classes of society. Conspicious among the criminal classes of this country are

The tendency of the Chinese to crime is especially great, and is well worthy the closest consideration of the moralist, the philanthro pist, the philosopher and the historian to say naught of the politician. The inner lives of the Chinese is replete with mystery and superstition. Within with mystery and superstition. Within the past century France has thrown aside the yoke of tyranny; England and Germany, obeying the law of compul-sion, have become limited inside of absolute monarchies, while Russia and China alone of the great powers of the Old World still adhere to the ancient and tyrannical rule of Czar and Em-peror. Christianity and civilization have exerted but little influence with the people of these two nations where SLAVEBY BLOOMS

And liberty perishes. Crime seems to sely connected with the character Chinese, who, lacking in a sufficient degree of moral restraint, are generally but too willing for a suitable consideration to enter into any wicked scheme. The Chinese respect not the sanctity of the Christian oath, and feel neither fear nor reverence for aught save the Joss of their darkened religion In this country the Chinese characteris but little known and many of the darker and most awful practices of the Celestial have remained hidden from the eyes of the Caucasians. The full extent and nature of the crimes committed in California by the Chinese ar ommonly unknown, except it may be

A de-tailed recital of these crimes would make a volume equaling in dramatic incident any of the old sanguinary romances, dreams or tragedies, rivaling in plot and sensation the record of the dreadful "Council of Ten," or the dark and cruel acts of the Inquisition. All the crimes in the calendar, from misdemeanor to murder, have at divers times in the past been committed with-in the Chinese quarters of various cit-ies in California, and in a majority of these cases the identity of the felon murderers has remained undiscovered. The Chinese criminals thus successful

Have gradually grown bold and reckless until the era of crime inaugurated and pursued by them now appears to have reached its climax. A secret organiza-tion of so-called Chinese Free Masons is to-day in existence wherever there is a settlement of these strange people, in comparison with which the hoodlums and the white criminals seem utterly a settlem tame and insignificant. In to-morrow's Times will be found an interesting account of the Highbinders.

Corn-stalks for Fuel.

The smartest man I've met in Iowa is a farmer near Fort Dodge. His name is Bill'Ruggles. He has a 400 acre farm, a splendid dairy, a coal-mine under his farm, and a fine belt of hard timber within sight of his house.

When I went into Mr. Ruggles' large sitting-room, I noticed a very large stove. It was the shape of a parallelopipedon—about four feet long, three high, and the same broad. It heated the sitting-room and hall very nicely.

"I see you burn wood, Mr. Ruggles?" I remarked, as I held my hands up to warm them.

"No, sir—I can't afford to burn wood;

"No, sir—I can't afford to burn wood; it's too much work to cut it."

"Then oeal, I suppose?" I continued.

"No, sir—too much work to dig coal.
I'm burning something that beats coal or wood—cheaper than either of them, though I bave both coal and wood on the farm.

"Well, what can you burn cheaper than wood or coal?" I asked, desiring to solve the puzzle.

"Why, I burn corn stalks, air. Corn.

"Why, I burn corn-stalks, sir. Cornstalks are the cheapest and best fuel on earth. It is ten times as easy to gather corn-stalks and tie them into bunches as corn-stalks and tie them into bunches as it is to cut down these trees. Why, I can ge into the corn-field with two men, and in a day bundle up corn-stalks enough to warm my house all winter," "Let me see you put some corn-stalks into the stove," I said.

Mr. Ruggles stepped to the door and brought in a bundle of corn-stalks about three feet through. They were bound tightly together. The bundle weighed about ferty pounds. Then, lifting the top of the stove, he laid them in upon the glowing embers, and closed up the front damper.

"Three hours. I don't let them burn with a flame. My stove closes air-tight. I let them burn slowly without flame. I get all the heat there is in them. The stove is large, with an impense radiat. stove is large, with an immense radiating surface. It doesn't have to be very

"Now," said Mr. Ruggles, "five such bundles a day keep my sitting room warm—or 600 bundles for the winter. I can bind up 600 bundles of corn-stalks in two days alone. I couldn't chop the wood to warm this room in a week. Then in the spring I have a load of strong ashes for my wheat field, while my neighbors have to cut up the same corn-stalks in the spring to get them away from the harrow. It makes me smile when I hear about those idiots up in Minneagth who have for your control of the same state. in Minnesota who have fifty-acre corn fields, and still go cold or buy coal. Why, I'd rather burn corn-stalks than cut maple wood within sight of the house."

"How would wheat-straw do?" I ask-

"Just as well, only the stove would have to be twice as large. I'd have it made of sixteenth-of an inch boiler iron, four feet long and four feet high, with one little damper which could be closed

These sto air-tight."

These stoves can be made of sheet-iron. Any tinner can make them. They should be large, air-tight vats, with little pipes and one little damper, which can be closed tight by drawing a piece of sheet-iron over it. These stoves can be made these are resulted. of sneet-fron over it. These stoves can be made three-cornered, and set in the corner of a room out of the way. To keep them from burning the partition, put a layer of mortar or a row of bricks between the stove and the partitions, also, have brick and mortar under them. This thick brick and mortar will serve as a reservoir of heat, and, once hot, will remain hot for hours.

One man in Minnesota showed me a stove for burning straw, which was built of brick. It was set into the side of the house so as to warm two rooms, and was fed from a third room, which was the woodshed. Thus the dirt, ashes and straw all littered up the wood shed, while the clean heat came into the house. On each side of the stove, between the stove and the partitions. between the stove and the partitions, were layers of brick a foot thick, which acted as heat-reservoirs.—Eli Perkins, in Chicago Tribune.
